

Cannabis Industry Training for Regulators

Why Training is Needed

The regulated cannabis industry continues to increase its presence in California and across the country. City, county, and state regulatory agencies are required to inspect cannabis businesses and enforce the current regulations. Regulatory personnel implementing cannabis regulations need to understand how the industry is producing and distributing cannabis products, how to properly perform a site compliance inspection, and what the associated safety hazards are when performing on-site inspections of cannabis facilities.

Training Overview

Cannabis Industry for Regulators is a valuable training program intended for regulatory personnel (or those overseeing such personnel) who may be visiting cannabis businesses in California for the purpose of performing site audits. The course covers the continually evolving industry practices and regulations that apply to this burgeoning industry, the protocols for performing inspections, and the hazards inherent to cannabis operations. Course participants will gain a greater understanding of the California cannabis industry, its rules and regulations, their role within the industry, and how to professionally and safely conduct a cannabis site inspection.
